

Do you live with one of these cancers?

Lung cancer

Liver cancer

Brain cancer

Oesophageal cancer

Pancreatic cancer

Stomach cancer

Would you like the opportunity to help other people?

If yes, consider taking part in the GoodDay project.

About the project

The GoodDay project will explore how people affected by cancer understand and describe a 'good day' in their life. It will also explore what things they identify as contributing to the experience of a good day.

The study will enable people affected by cancer to think about what makes a positive impact on their life. We will use the results of this study to refocus cancer care to target and support people's positive life experiences for better wellbeing.

What's involved?

The study involves one online or telephone interview with the researcher.

You can take part in this study if you are older than 18 and you have been diagnosed with one of these cancers: lung, liver, brain, oesophageal, pancreatic or stomach cancer.

You can take part if you speak any of these languages: English, Dutch, Greek, Portuguese and Spanish.

You may live anywhere in Europe.

Would you like to find out more?

Please contact the researchers for more information.

- Dr Celia Diez de los Rios de la Serna (Research Associate)
Email: Celia.DiezdelosRiosdelaSerna@glasgow.ac.uk
- Dr Greg Kotronoulas (Principal Investigator)
Email: Grigorios.kotronoulas@glasgow.ac.uk. Tel: +447730190011.

This research has received ethical approval by the College of Medical, Veterinary & Life Sciences Ethics Committee, University of Glasgow (ref. no. 200240346).